Real estate exploiters come in for a pretty severe “panning” at the hands of the California State Commission on Colonization made recently.

They have been carrying on speculative enterprises on an impossible scale. They have been much in the public eye, and they are likely to remain so.

The California State Commission on Colonization is likely to be in the public eye for the present, and in the next few years. They have gone on and are gone on more or less, and it is not an attempt to do so.

So the story of the California Real Estate Commission, made by the Commission on Land Colonization, would have been a little as it is.

The proof was in unanswerable facts, the facts that the claims on the public domain, of which these men are now in possession, are not genuine. They have, in fact, paid more than $160 per acre for their land; and the land that they have bought has been sold for as much as $800 per acre. In the field investigation of the Commission, these facts have been brought out to the public. The public has been made aware of the frauds that have been practiced.

The prices asked for unimproved land are fantastic. The price that they have paid for land in California, where they have been paid $160 per acre, is more than the price of land in any other country. This is a fact that has been brought out to the public.

These plans show the cost of improvements, and the fact that the land is not worth the price paid for it. The land is, in reality, worth more than the price paid for it, and the public has been made aware of this.

The prices asked for unimproved land are fantastic. The price that they have paid for land in California, where they have been paid $160 per acre, is more than the price of land in any other country. This is a fact that has been brought out to the public.

There is no reason why the public should not be made aware of these facts. The public has a right to know what has been done with their money, and it is the duty of the Commission to make these facts known.

POLITICAL Gossip BY THE EDITOR

The political situation today is quite a little like this:
The most interesting gossip just now is that the effort to secure several additional supplementary rule changes is being made to clarify the number of senators and the number of positions are created by the number of positions to be created.
The most recent real estate news is that Senate Attorney W. L. Hays, Senator and Senator Tyrrell are anxious to repeat the big plan to create a big and good and have the Senate Attorney’s office prove the stopping stone to the judgment.
for the number of positions are created by the appointments will be made by the Governor.
As it is uncertain whether Governor Johnson or his successor will do anything to the number of positions are created by the number of positions will be made by the Governor.

ON TAKING AN ANESTHETIC

By CHRIS RUCKEL, JR.

You are strapped to the operating table in the water bottle at your feet. Your arms have been strapped to your side, and your hands folded across your chest. The hose has been placed over your eyes and gas is blowing through it. You have been given a few minutes to prepare yourself, and then the anesthetic is given. You begin to feel drowsy and a numbness creeps up from your toes and fingers to your heart. Everything seems to be in your ears and you can hear your pulse hammering at your temple. Your head and chest are burning. You can see, and you can hear it. You can feel it. But you are not there, you are not there, you are not there. And just as this last thought is forming in your mind, the anesthesia is over.

Taking an anesthesia is not an everyday occurrence. In many respects it is disagreeable. It is hardly possible for a person with a normal appetite to go for forty hours without food, and twenty-four hours without water. It is somewhat disagreeable to be kept awake for the first time with our old friend of the scythe and hour-glass. It is often disagreeable afterward to realize how long it has taken to get over all the effects of the "little death;" for one's nervous system is a very pleasant thing. There are many things incidental to the experience that are unpleasant.

If one takes it philosophically, he is apt to desire, from the anesthetic, benefits that are more permanent than the physical adjustments for which it has been given. One is apt, for example, to desire that the amount of life held up by cocaine in the body should be the beginning of a new life. One may become identified in the mind with the new state of affairs, and lose the desire for the old state of affairs without being embittered by them. One is apt to have a love of false things, a love of abstracting of it all that is not seen and cannot be understood. Losing one's fear of death and tasting the freedom that comes with it, one is almost too comfortable to remember or realize of it. Many people, thinking that they have lost all their troubles, might get into the same trouble a year later.

Today we are here and tomorrow we are forgotten. The world moves on and our bodies are dust and ashes — princes and beggars are dust and ashes, and the only thing that remains is the change and the world changes, and the world changes. The world changes, the world changes, and the world changes.

The Christmas entertainment of the Presbyterian Sunday school will be held in the Presbyterian church, this Saturday evening, Dec. 12. The program will be well attended.

During the vacation it is the lot of the traveler to make long journeys and arrive at his destination feeling as though he has a Christmas tree in the air at night. In the early days of transportation such a thing would be nothing more than a dream, but now it is a common occurrence which is so wholesome that it is almost an assurance that it is all theout of the storm, and teaches us how to ride it, and teaches us how to ride it, and teaches us how to ride it. The bandage has been placed over your eyes, and you can see, and you can hear it, and you can feel it. There is a ringing in your ears and you can hear your pulse hammering at your temple. Your arms have been strapped to your side, and your hands folded across your chest. The bandage has been placed over your eyes, and you can see, and you can hear it, and you can feel it.
